WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Meeting of Those Interested in Cause Held Today.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon a meeting of those interested in women's suffrage was held at the home of Miss Alice Mossop.

Miss Louise Hall, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage association, will address the women and explaining the objects of the movement, and endeavor to organize the nucleus of a branch of the association in Clearfield.

IN GOVERNOR'S HANDS

Keeler's Death Warrant May be Issued Before Many Days.

The superior court's decision refusing a new trial to John Keeler, murderer of Joseph Roessner, was received by Prothonotary Moore Friday, and after being duly certified, was mailed to Governor Tener.

It is probable that the governor will issue Keeler's death warrant this month, although the date of execution may be fixed for January or February, to give the prisoner time in which to prepare for the end.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE ENDS ITS SESSIONS

An Attack on Secretary Bryan in a Resolution

Columbus, O., November 15.—After a day during which temperance forces from every part of the country assembled at the fifteenth national convention of the Anti-Saloon league of America went on record through the adoption of resolutions as favoring nation-wide prohibition of the liquor traffic to be attained by means of a federal constitutional amendment opposing the system of license or taking revenue from the liquor business, urging states to pass anti-liquor shipping laws and making a veiled attack on Secretary of State Bryan for his part in the recent senatorial campaign in Maryland, the convention adjourned here Thursday night.

The veiled attack on Secretary Bryan came when the convention adopted a resolution stating that federal officers interfering in state politics should consider themselves the moral guardians and political sponsors of men elected to office through their influence and should hold themselves responsible for the conduct of these men while in office.

Members of the resolution committee said that they had in mind Secretary Bryan and the part he took in the election of Blair Lee as United States senator from Maryland when the resolution was drawn.

Rev. D. Purley A. Baker was re-elected national superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league for two years.

Bishop Luther B. Wilson, of New York, was re-elected national president of the league; S. E. Nicholson, of Richmond, Ind., was elected secretary and Foster Copeland, Columbus, treasurer. Under the new constitution they will take office June 1, 1914.

STREET WALKERS FINED

Two Clearfield Girls Get Into Trouble in Altoona.

It is not often the women outnumber male defendants in city police court but Thursday was their day as the result of lively celebrations on Wednesday. Marie Sarah and Agnes Wilson, a trio of girls hailing from Clearfield, at 10 o'clock Thursday morning were given a hearing on the charge of street walking, disorderly conduct and profanity. They raised a lot of excitement on Seventeenth street and were taken into custody. They were each fined $25 or twenty-five days in jail.

MURDOCK TALKS TO THE POINT

Famous Insurgent's Lecture Pleases Fair Crowd

ATTACKS SPECIAL INTEREST

Advises Young Men to Do More Thinking for Themselves—Explains His Fight Against Excessive Charges by Railroads for Carrying Mails—An Earnest and Able Speaker.

Victor Murdock, of Kansas, the noted insurgent who has stirred up things in congress for several years, delivered his lecture in the opera house Friday evening, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., and greatly pleased an audience which might have been larger. Mr. Murdock was presented to the audience by Judge Allison O. Smith, who in a few well-chosen words, told of the work Mr. Murdock has been doing for the people of this country. Judge Smith is a great admirer of the Kansas and his praise of Mr. Murdock's efforts along the line of reform was sincere.

Mr. Murdock's Address.
Mr. Murdock—who says he is proud of the title, "The Red Headed Insurgent," which has been bestowed upon him, made a most favorable impression upon the audience. His remarks were in keeping with his well-known reputation as a fighter. The cause of the people against the special interests are so strongly entrenched in political power that they ignore or oppress the people at will.

The lecturer told of his struggle in behalf of the people in the matter of the mail-carrying railroads, which the railroads were attacked by him for charging the government millions of dollars beyond what they were legally entitled to for carrying the mails. The dispute in congress brings about the executive order of President Roosevelt prohibiting the railroads from weighing the mails seven days a week and dividing the railroads from weighing the mails by millions of dollars.

Denounces Selfish Interests.
Mr. Murdock expressed his opinion of special interests and crooked judges in a vigorous manner, stating that unless the people arouse to the danger that confronts them the special interests, aided by corrupt judges, would have full control of the country.

In closing the speaker hoped that some of the seed he had sown in his address would take root in the minds of young men. The trouble with the average American, he said, was that he does not think enough for himself, but takes too much for granted, holding fast to one or other of the political parties blindly. This has the effect of increasing the power for evil possessed by the special interests.

Friday evening a number of Mr. Murdock's admirers had him as the guest of honor at a dinner at the Dimeling. The affair was informal and the little party heartily enjoyed the personal intercourse with the noted congressman.

AN ITALIAN BAND

Clearfield to Have Another Musical Organization of Merit.

Clearfield is to have a band composed of Italian citizens. The band has been organized and Professor Salvatore Impallomany, of New York city, arrived in Clearfield on the Pennsylvania train yesterday morning to take charge of the organization of the band and to act as its instructor. The band will be conducted in connection with the Mutual Aid society of the Italian society and will have its headquarters with the society on Second street.

Prof. Impallomany received his musical education in Rome, Italy, in the royal academy of Music of St. Cecilia. He is a skilled musician and under his tutelage the Italian band of Clearfield will no doubt become famous throughout the West Branch valley. The band will have sixty members.

MRS. CLARA J. BOYLE

Death of Highly Respected Christian Woman.

Mrs. Clara J. Boyle, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edith Woodell on Water street, Friday morning, aged 63 years and 23 days. Mrs. Boyle was a widow and the following children survive her: Loren E. Boyle, clerk in the U. S. Engineer's office, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Mary Fulton, Clearfield; Mrs. Carrie Hall, Clearfield; Mrs. Charles L. Boyle, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Hattie Lewis, Fairfield; Mrs. Edith Woodell, Clearfield; Mrs. Mabel Gully and Mrs. Stella Bergquist, both of Pittsburgh.

FULFORD FUNERAL

Body of Well-Known Citizen Laid to Rest This Afternoon.

The funeral of George Fulford was held from the residence of his mother on Pine street this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. E. C. Reeve, of the First Presbyterian church, conducted the religious ceremony. Interment was made in Hillcrest cemetery. The pall bearers were Singleton Bell, Esq., William Hagerly, Esq., Hazard Murray, Esq., George R. Bigger, Esq., Richard Kennard and W. I. Betts.

JERSEY SHORE TERMINAL

Rumor That N. Y. C. Will Cease Running Trains to Williamsport.

The Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin says: It is rumored that after Monday next the Beech Creek division of the New York Central, which now operates trains into this city will no longer do this, but that its terminal point will be made at Jersey Shore. After that date, according to the rumor, all passengers desiring to go up the Beech Creek must go up the Fall Brook division of the New York Central and change cars at Jersey Shore and vice versa on the down trip.

If the rumor becomes a fact it will be necessary for various train crews residing in Williamsport and Newberry to remove to Jersey Shore, as they cannot arrive at Jersey Shore in sufficient time to make up their trains in the morning or get down there at night at any reasonable time. The report has caused considerable anxiety among Central railroad employees.

UNION SERVICES

Will Be Held in Presbyterian Church Thanksgiving Day.

Union Thanksgiving services will be held in the Presbyterian church Thursday morning, Nov. 27 at ten o'clock. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. B. A. Salter.

The offering will be for the Clearfield hospital. In view of the needs of the institution and the great work that is being done for the suffering, this offering should be a very liberal one.

Will Hold Euchre.

There will be a euchre in the St. Francis Catholic school on Wednesday evening, Nov. 19.

Married on Tuesday.

Cornelius Barron and Mrs. Kate Smith were married Tuesday evening 11:30 in the St. Francis Catholic church by Father Ryan. The witnesses were William Steiner and Mrs. New McDonald.

Knowing and Telling.

"I don't expect to make tellin' all he knows," said Fudge John, "if he honestly knows all he tells."

HUERTA HIDDEN; MAKES NO REPLY

American Representatives Leave Mexican Capital.

WILSON'S DEMANDS IGNORED

Expectation in Mexican Capital That Diplomatic Relations Will Be Severed Following Lind's Departure—Tuxpan at Mercy of Revolutionists—Negotiations With Carranza.

City of Mexico, Nov. 15.—Provisional President Huerta has given no indication that he intended to accede to the demands made of him by the United States government in regard to the newly elected congress which he was requested to prevent from convening.

When John Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson, sent a notification to General Huerta that the United States government would have no further parley with the Mexican government unless the provisional president replied to the American demands he also let General Huerta understand that the Mexican government must inform the members of the diplomatic corps of its action in respect to the congress at once.

Mr. Lind, who left the federal capital, has arrived in Vera Cruz, while Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires of the United States legation, awaits instructions from Washington. It is generally expected here that Washington will instruct Mr. O'Shaughnessy to close the embassy or to turn it over to the legation of some friendly power.

Say Huerta Was Not to Be Found.
All speculation as to the future, however, is tempered by doubt as to the state of affairs at the national palace. Representations were made to both John Lind and Nelson O'Shaughnessy that in reality the provisional president had not been apprised of the demands from Washington, and this appeared to be substantiated by statements made at the government offices. It was declared that Adolfo de Luna, Mexican minister of finance, himself had engaged in the search for Provisional President Huerta and up to a late hour had not succeeded in finding him either at the national palace, at his family home or at any of the places where he was accustomed to go.

Many persons here had regarded this absence as a ruse on the part of General Huerta to avoid the receipt of the notification from the United States, but there seems to be reason to believe that his country and the United States arrived at the point of rupture in their relations without the knowledge of the provisional president. Close friends and political associates of General Huerta appeared earnest in their assertions that they could not find him. It was suggested in some quarters that he had run away. This suggestion, however, was received with skepticism. It is assumed here by many of those familiar with the situation that the logical course to be pursued by the United States will be to recall Nelson O'Shaughnessy at once unless General Huerta appears upon the scene and yields all the demands of Washington. It is thought it would be followed soon by some act on the part of Washington which would be tantamount to recognition of the belligerency of the rebels.

The Palmetto State.

The origin of the state arms of South Carolina is thus given in the histories: "On June 28, 1776, a force of less than 100 Carolinians, under command of Moultrie, protected by the rude fortification of Sullivan's Island, in Charleston harbor, made of the trunks of a palmetto, repulsed the attack of a British fleet under command of Sir Peter Parker, and when the state of South Carolina was organized the state seal, which was first used in May, 1777, was made to commemorate this victory. A palm tree growing erect on the sea shore represents the strength of the fort, while at its base an oak tree, torn from the ground and deprived of its branches, recalls the British fleet built of oak timber, overcome by the palmetto."

Crocodile in a Tree.

An African hunter once found a large crocodile hanging in the fork of a tree about ten feet from the ground. As the place was fully half a mile from any water it was difficult to account for the crocodile's strange position. When questioned about the subject the natives explained that it was put there by an elephant. It seems that when the elephants wade into the Lake N'guri to bathe the crocodiles swim in the water of worrying them and after their legs. Sometimes when an elephant is annoyed beyond endurance it picks up its tormentor in its trunk, places it among the branches of a tree and leaves it there.—London Graphic.

A GOOD MOVE

Pennsy May Adopt a Wise Rule Regarding Employees.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company is considering the advisability of establishing a rule that employees shall live or take their rest, sufficiently near to their work to enable them to report for duty at any hour, day or night, with not more than one hour of necessary traveling between their home or resting place and the point where they begin work.

Many cases have come to the notice of the management wherein men are living considerable distance from their places of work, and though they spend only a reasonable time at work so much additional time is required in traveling to and from work that they do not have sufficient rest and recreation. In some instances men live from fifty to one hundred miles from the place where they report for duty.

The purpose of the Pennsylvania management in considering adoption of the rule in question is that men may have every reasonable freedom, directing their private lives to suit themselves but under the stipulation that they shall live, or take their rest, at points which will enable them to report for work without undue time elapsing in their doing so.

SOME RAILS ROLLED AT THE BIG MILL

Probability of Plant Starting Next Week

This week the rolling mill at Hyde City almost completed its preparations for the opening of the plant. For several days rails were rolled to give the management a chance to see if everything worked properly, and the result was all that could be desired.

The only defect that was discovered was in the motor which runs the machine which breaks up the old rails and other iron. This motor was found to be in need of repair, and this work is now in progress. It is expected that if no other hitch occurs the rolling mill will be in full operation next week, as everything is in readiness for the starting of the plant.

General Manager Baumgarten is satisfied with the manner in which the machinery runs, and believes that after the start has been made everything will move along smoothly.

Out at Service

A young housekeeper, if her cook is stupid, her nurse idle, her maid more given to flirtation than to household duties, sighs for the model servants of the good old times. But did "the good old times" ever exist historically, or do they only live in dreams and ballads?

Charles Dickens tells of the appalling stupidity of London kitchens. Sir Walter Scott mentions a genius who, fearing that all his master's bees would desert the hive, plastered the openings and suffocated all the inmates. Samuel Breck has grown a man's account of burglars, highwaymen, pirates and murderers among the convicts sent over from England before the Revolution. Daniel Defoe's pictures of extravagance, carelessness, rascality and all that is undesirable among servants is a classic. Jonathan Swift's "Directions to Servants" seems to forecast every story of negligence, or wastefulness, or dirtiness the present generation has heard.—Living Church.

The Top Hat.

Although the beginning of the "cylinder of civilization," as it has been called, can be traced back to the Elizabethan era, it is only about seventy or eighty years ago that the top hat of the present day reached its final shape. Since then it has altered slightly in the dimensions of the crown and the curl of the brim, but the hat itself has remained essentially unchanged. The top hat seems to have had its beginning in the habit of gallants in the Elizabethan period of cocking up one side of their broad brimmed, high crowned felt or beaver hats and securing them with a jewel. The French court later developed this into cocking up three sides of the hat and fastening one with a loop of ribbon. From this fashion came the cockade, now used only by grooms and footmen. The silk hat of today was born in France and supplanted the now nearly extinct beaver hat of practically the same shape, though considerably larger.—London Standard.

Hot Vinegar in Sauces.

If hot vinegar is used instead of cold when making meat sauce, it will greatly improve the flavor and give the sauce a better color.

Y. M. C. A. ATHLETICS

The gymnasium at the Young
Men's Christian association is now
in full operation and the winter
season of 1913-14 among the young
athletes of the association promises
to be a successful and profitable one.
The various classes are being organized and before the winter has
fairly begun each class will have
its full quota of members. Basketball is the game with which the members will amuse themselves during November and December, with other
sports filling in the gaps.
The athletic department of the Y.
M. C. A. appeals to every boy who wishes to grow up manly and healthy.
In the association gymnasium there
are opportunities for physical exercise and culture equal to those to
be found in much larger towns, and
parents should see that their young
sons take advantage of such whole-
some pastimes as are afforded by the association gymnasium. The early training of muscles and sinews develops the body and makes the
mind stronger for the duties which
come in after years.

Clearfield will have an Italian
band, a fact which ought to give pleasure to music lovers. Italian
are natural-born musicians, and a
band composed of such material as
is to be found in Clearfield will
prove a valuable addition to the musical associations of the town. Clearfield Italians are among the most intelligent and industrious of the sons
of Italy who have taken up their abode
in the United States, and have the
respect of the people of this town.

QUEER, ISN'T IT?

Queer, isn't it, that the Penrose
leaders are so anxious to have the Progressive voters rejoin the Republican party? These Penrose leaders
tell the people in one breath that
the Progressive party has been destroyed and in the next breath beg
these Progressive voters to return to the Republican party. If the Progressive party has gone all to pieces,
as Penrose people say, why should
the bosses be so alarmed? Are they afraid the Progressives will come
to life again?

The Progressive party is perfectly
willing to unite with the Republican
rank and file, but the Progressives
will never return to the Republican party so long as that party is in control of Senator Penrose and his henchmen. This fact should be borne in mind by Penrose tools. Only by renouncing Penrose and such braze-
bosses as he and not only promising, but keeping their promises, to give the people good government
can the Republican party hope to escape the disintegration which now
faces the organization.

It is useless for the Penrose machine that the Republican party is the only party which promises to the people relief from political brigandage, but the people have
seen how easy it is for the Penrose
machine to forget its promises after election. And the promises were made only to fool the people. When
the people found that the Progressive
party would be true to its promises
they gathered about that party's standards four million of them voting in 1912.

It is useless for the Penrose machine to hope that the voters who

supported the Progressive or Washington ticket in Pennsylvania will return to the Penrose party. On the other hand, it can be stated with positive assurance that instead of
being demoralized and about to
dwindle away, the Washington party
in this state is daily adding new recruits to its ranks, a fact that perturbs the Penrose machine a great
deal and causes the senator to fear
that his reign as boss of the Republican party in Pennsylvania will
be brief and that his chances of re-
election are fast disappearing.

You couldn't do better than buy
your young son a membership certificate in the Clearfield Y. M. C.
A. as a Christmas gift.

Don't take too long to thing about
helping the public library project
along, but join the movement at once.

Warren Worth Bailey, editor of
the Johnstown Democrat and member
of congress, says he does not want
to run for governor of Pennsylvania.
Warren sure displays great wisdom.

Cheer up! Probably if there is war with Mexico you may escape the draft.

The debts of the nations of the world is said to be forty-two billion dollars. Wonder if this includes the little loans the impetu-ous individual secures from his friends occasionally.

Physicians are asked to remove
their whiskers in the interest of sanitation. Physicians ought to know that millions of microbes lurk in
the loads of alfalfa which they carry
around on their faces.

Of course everybody will want to
hear the Thanksgiving concert to be given by the Clearfield Choral society
on Tuesday evening, November
twenty-fifth. This concert promises to be the best given in Clearfield in
years.

ROOM AT THE TOP.

THERE'S ever a crowd in the
valley.
For the lower a soul de-
scends

The more it finds of the smaller minds
That seek out their selfish ends
There's companionship in the valley.

With others your lot is thrown,
But the man who tries for the larger prize
Must travel the heights alone.

He must make for himself a path-
way
Where no other foot e'er trod
Till he grows complete in continent sweet.

As he learns to walk with God,
There is glory upon the mountain,
Though the summit is cold and bleak.

Yet the radiant burst of the dawn
falls first
Like a blowing rose on the peak.

Then dare the paths of the mountain.
Oh, spirit with godlike fire,
Whose depths are stirred by an inward word.

To struggle and to aspire,
Be not content with the shaggard,
In the valley of life to stop.
But with purpose hold heed the
adage old:

"There's always room at the top."
—J. A. Edgerton

Blind Swimmers.
The man who is unfortunate enough
to lose his sight or to be born blind is
says a medical authority, severely
handicapped on dry ground, but he
can, if he is a swimmer, find his way
easily enough in the water. Blind
people generally have a keen sense of
hearing, and they can steer themselves
in the water by sound as well as an ordinary man by sight. If they are swimming toward a certain point a whistle from time to time will enable them to reach it with unerring accuracy. This fact has been proved by some interesting experiments. A race
between blind men and ordinary swimmers on a lake resulted in a victory
for the former. Normal swimmers
lose much time in raising their heads
for the purpose of keeping their eyes
on the winning post. This also prevents them from concentrating all
their attention on speed. Exchange

Roses For Restoring Hair.
Roses form the chief ingredient in what is probably the earliest recipe for
a hair restorer on record. According to Pliny, "wild rose leaves reduced into
a liniment with bear's grease make the
hair grow again in most marvelous
fashion." Pliny also recommends
"ashes of roses as serving to trim
the hairs of the eyebrows." Roses
figured prominently in several old time
strong drinks, such as rose soils, which
consisted of rosewater mixed with aquas vitae and flavored with cinnamon. The favorite morning draft among Elizabethan rosters was
"rosa soils, to wash the moulgrubs out
of a moody brain."—London Chronicle

Order Ball Game.
Tennis is pronounced the oldest of
all the existing ball games. It is impossible to give its origin, but it was
played in Europe during the middle ages in the parks or ditches of the feudal castles. It was at first the

Lesson VII.—Fourth Quarter. For
Nov. 16, 1913.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Deut. xxxiv, 1-12
Memory Verses, 5-7—Golden Text,
Ps. cxvi, 15—Commentary by Rev. D.
M. Stearns.

We have now come to our last lesson
in the books of Moses and to the record
of his removal from the earth. The book of Genesis covers a period of
over 2,200 years. Exodus over 200.
Numbers about forty years, but Leviticus and Deuteronomy do not bring
us any farther down the stream of
time. The book of Deuteronomy seems
to cover about one month, in which Moses rehearsed to Israel the Lord's
dealings with them.

We have seen that Aaron died in the
fifth month of the fortieth year and Miriam in the first month (Num. xx,
1; xxxii, 38). Moses continued until the eleventh or twelfth month. He began his rehearsal in the eleventh month
of the fortieth year (Deut. i, 3) and
continued until the time of his departure (chapter xxxi, 1, 2). We would like to call attention to many things in
these closing chapters, but will first
consider our lesson chapter, the first
four verses of which tell us how the Lord showed him from the top of Pis-
gab, over against Jericho, all the land
which He swore to Abraham, to Isaac
and to Jacob to give unto their seed,
but which neither Moses nor Aaron
could enter because of his rebellion
against the word of the Lord at Maribah (Num. xx, 12, 24). It is written that Moses pleaded with the Lord to allow him to go over the Jordan and
see the good land, but the Lord would
not hear him and said to him: "Let it
suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter" (Deut. iii, 23, 27). And this because he had spoken unduly with his lips, having allowed his spirit to be provoked, and had smitten the rock instead of speaking to it as God
had commanded.

Many a time he had pleaded with
the Lord in prayer for this rebellious
people, and now because of their little request for him, it is denied. Yet God is love, and love is kind. Well might
the psalmist say: "If thou, Lord,
shouldst mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand?" (Ps. cxl, 22, 23; xxxv, 2.)
We cannot but think of Him who did not save Himself in order that He might save us. Of this very event,
His decease at Jerusalem, Moses and Elijah talked with Him on the Mount
of Transfiguration some 1,500 years
after the event of our lesson (Luke ix, 30, 31). Of all the events that have ever transpired on our earth none can
compare with those of Gethsemane.
Though there have been many fore-
shadowings, the mind of man cannot
grasp the awful realities of that day
and the Son of God suffering for the
sins of the world.

So Moses, the servant of the Lord,
died, but there was nothing sad in such a death. It was a release from the long conflict with the world, the flesh
and the devil, and a going home to stay with God, whom he had long known face to face. There was neither sickness nor suffering; his eye was not
dim nor his natural force abated (verses
5, 7, 10). Aaron had no sickness (Num.
xx, 25-28). Sickness is not necessary to death. Do we not see it all about
us and read of it in the papers every
day, whether it is called by the name
of heart failure or some other name?
Even should it be a violent death our Lord said, "Fear not them which kill
the body." And we are elsewhere taught that to die is gain. It is to depart and be with Christ, which is very
far better; it is to be absent from the body and present with the Lord, and
precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints (Matt. x, 28; Phil.
i, 21, 23; 1 Cor. v, 8; Ps. cxvi, 15).
Moses died and was buried in the
land of Moab, but no man knoweth
where (verses 5, 6). He and Eleazar probably buried Aaron's body, but
there was no man present at the death
and burial of Moses. The Lord did it.
The record is, "He buried him." Perhaps the angels helped.

I am glad that the body is not the
person, and, though we bury bodies, we
do not, strictly speaking, bury people.
A man once said: "You may bury me if you can catch me. There is great comfort to me in knowing that I shall not
be at my own funeral if my body ever
has one." There is always the possibility of not dying, but of being caught
up to meet the Lord in the air, for we shall not all sleep (1 Cor. xv, 51; 1 Thess. iv, 16-18).
Some already have their glorified
bodies, as Enoch and Elijah, who were translated, and probably those who
came out of their graves after the resurrection of the Lord Jesus (Matt.
xxvii, 52, 53).
It looks from Jude 9 as if the body
of Moses was raised from the dead, for
the devil does hate the resurrection of
the bodies of the saints, and that may
have been the cause of the contention
there referred to, for Michael is the
special angel of Israel (Dan. x, 13, 21;
Rev. xii, 7). The story of Joshua, the
new leader, will come before us more fully in our next lesson. Let us give attention to some of the last words of Moses. Notice how he set before them
life and good or death and evil; life
and death, blessing and cursing, urging
them to choose life, and to set their hearts unto all the words which he had spoken as their very life (Deut. xxx, 15, 16; xxxii, 46, 47).

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA
FROM THE PLAY OF BAYARD VELLER

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly company.

As the eyes of the two met the boy rushed forward, and in the next moment the hands of father and son clasped firmly. Presently Gilder spoke, with an effort toward harshness in his voice to mask how much he was shaken. But the tones rang more kindly than any he had used for many a day tremulous with affection.

"Why, I just wanted to come back home," he said lightly. "And, for the love of heaven, give Sadie $5. I borrowed it from her to pay the taxi. You see, dad, I'm broke."

"Of course!" With the saying Edward Gilder roared gargantuan laughter. In the burst of merriment his pent feelings found their vent. He was still chuckling when he spoke, sage from much experience of ocean travel "Poker on the ship, I suppose."

"No, not that, though I did have a little run in at Monte Carlo. But it was the ship that finished me at that. You see, dad, they hired Captain Kidd and a bunch of pirates as stewards, and what they did to little Richard was something fierce. And yet, that wasn't the real trouble either. The fact is I just naturally went broke. Not a hard thing to do on the other side."

"Nor on this," the father interjected, dryly. "Anyhow, it doesn't matter much," Dick replied, quite unabashed. "Tell me, dad, how goes it?"

"Pretty well, pretty well, son. I'm glad to see you home again, my boy." There was a great tenderness in the usually rather cold gray eyes.

"And I'm glad to be home, dad, to be"—there was again that clearing of the throat, but he finished bravely—"with you."

The father avoided a threatening display of emotion by an abrupt change of subject to the trite "Have a good time?" he inquired casually.

"The time of my young life. I tell you, dad, it's a fact that I did almost break the bank at Monte Carlo. I'd have done it sure if only my money had held out."

"It seems to me that I've heard something of the sort before," was Gilder's caustic comment. But his smile was still wholly sympathetic. He took a curious vicarious delight in the escapades of his son, probably because he himself had committed no follies in his callow days. "Why didn't you cable me?" he asked, puzzled at such restraint on the part of his son.

"Because it gave me a capital excuse for coming home."

"You clear out of here, boy!" Gilder commanded brusquely. "I'm a working man. But here, wait a minute," he added. He brought forth from a pocket a neat sheaf of banknotes, which he held out. "There's carfare for you," he said, with a chuckle. "And now clear out. I'll see you at dinner."

"You can always get rid of me on the same terms," Dick remarked slyly. In the doorway he turned with a final speech, which was uttered in splendid disregard for the packet of money he had just received. "Oh, dad, please don't forget to give Sadie that $5 I borrowed from her for the taxi."

The owner of the store returned to his labors with a new zest, for the meeting with his son had put him in high spirits. Perhaps it might have been better for Mary Turner had she come to him just then, while he was yet in this softened mood. But fate had ordained that other events should restore him to his usual harder self before their interview. Smithson entered with an expression of discomfort on his rather vacuous countenance. He walked almost dumbly to the desk and spoke with evident distress as his employer looked up interrogatively.

"McCracken has detained—or a lady, sir," he said feebly. "She has been searched, and we have found about $100 worth of laces on her."

"Well?" Gilder demanded impatiently. Such affairs were too common in the store to make necessary this intrusion of the matter on him. "Why did you come to me about it?"

"I'm very sorry, sir, but I thought it wiser, sir, to—er—to bring the matter to your personal attention. The lady happens to be the wife of J. W. Gaskell, the banker, you know."

CHAPTER III.

The Victim of the Law.

YES, Gilder did know. The mention of the name was like a spell in the effect it wrought on the attitude of the irritated owner of the store. Instantly his expression changed.

"How extremely awkward!" he cried, and there was a very real concern in his voice. He regarded Smithson kindly, whereas that rather peevish gentleman once again assumed his martial bearing. "You were quite right in coming to me." For a moment he was silent, plunged in thought. Finally he spoke with the decisiveness characteristic of him. "Of course there's nothing we can do. Just put the stuff back on the counter and let her go."

But Smithson had not yet wholly unburdened himself. He again cleared his throat nervously.

"She's very angry, Mr. Gilder," he announced timidly. "She—er—she demands an—er—an apology."

The owner of the store half rose from his chair, then threw himself back with an exclamation of disgust.

"God bless my soul!" he cried. Again he fell silent, considering the situation which Smithson had presented. At last, however, he mastered his irritation to some degree and spoke his command briefly. "Well, Smithson, apologize to her. It can't be helped."

When Smithson had left the office Gilder turned to his secretary.

"Take this," he directed, and he forthwith dictated the following letter:

J. W. Gaskell, Esq., Central National Bank, New York.

My Dear Mr. Gaskell—I feel that I should be doing less than my duty as a man if I did not let you know at once that Mrs. Gaskell is in urgent need of medical attention. She came into our store today, and—

He paused for a moment. "No, put it this way," he said finally:

"We found her wandering about our store today in a very nervous condition. In her excitement she carried away about $100 worth of rare laces. Not recognizing her, our store detective detained her for a short time. Fortunately for us all, Mrs. Gaskell was able to explain who she was, and she has just gone to her home. Hoping for Mrs. Gaskell's speedy recovery."

Smithson again entered the office, even more perturbed than before.

"What on earth is the matter now?" Gilder spluttered suspiciously.

"It's Mrs. Gaskell still," Smithson replied in great trepidation. "She wants you personally, Mr. Gilder, to apologize to her. She says that the action taken against her is an outrage, and she is not satisfied with the apologies of all the rest of us. She says you must make one, too, and that the store detective must be discharged for intolerable insolence."

Gilder bounced up from his chair angrily.

"I'll not discharge McCracken," he vociferated, glaring on Smithson, who shrank visibly.

"But about the apology, Mr. Gilder," he reminded, speaking very deferentially, yet with insistence.

"Oh, I'll apologize," he said with a very smile of discomfort. "I'll make things even up a bit when I get an apology from Gaskell. I shrewdly suspect that that estimable gentleman is going to eat humble pie, of my baking, from his wife's recipe. And his will be an honest apology, which mine won't." And he left the room.

It was on this same day that Sarah, on one of her numerous trips through the store in behalf of Gilder, was accosted by a salesgirl, whose name, Helen Morris, she chanced to know.

"What on earth do you want?" Sarah inquired sharply.

"What did they do to Mary Turner?"

"They sent her to prison for three years."

"Three years?" The salesgirl had repeated the words in a tone that was indignant, yet a tone vehement with incredulous questioning. "Three years?" she said again, as one refusing to believe.

"Yes, three years." "Good God!" There was no reverence in the exclamation that broke from the girl's lips. Instead only a tense horror that touched to the roots of emotion.

"Say," Sarah demanded, with the directness habitual to her, "why are you so anxious about it? This is the third time you have asked me about Mary Turner. What's it to you. I'd like to know?"

The salesgirl started violently, and a deep flush drove the accustomed pallor from her cheeks. She was obviously much disturbed by the question. "What is it to me?" she repeated in an effort to gain time. "Why, nothing—nothing at all, only, she's a friend of mine, a great friend of mine. Oh, yes!"

There was a monotone of desolation as she went on speaking in a whisper meant for the ears of no other. "It's awful three years! Oh, I didn't understand! It's awful—awful!" With the final word she hurried off, her attitude one of wondrous grief.

Sarah was thinking intently of Mary Turner after her return to the office. As she glanced up at the opening of the door, she did not at first recognize the

figure outlined there. She remembered Mary Turner as a tall, slender girl, who showed an underlying vitality in every movement, a girl with a face of regular features, in which was a complexion of blended milk and roses, with a radiant joy of life shining through all her arduous and vulgar conditions. Instead of this, now she saw a frail form that stood swaying in the doorway, that bent in a sinister fashion which told of bodily impotence, while the face was quite bloodless.

A man stood beside her, one of his hands clasped around the girl's wrist. It was Cassidy, from headquarters, who spoke in a rough, indifferent voice.

"The district attorney told me to bring this girl here on my way to the Grand Central station with her."

THANKS.

THANK God for this bright frailty of life.

The lyric briefness of its reckless spring.

Thank God for all the swift adventuring,

The bold uncertainty, the strengthening strife.

Thank God the world is set to such a tune.

That life is such a proud and crashing wave:

That none but lifeless things shall be time's slave.

Like the long dead but never tiring moon;

That godlike passion strangely leaps and runs;

That youth cannot grow old nor beauty stale;

That even death is fragile and must fall before the winds of joy that speed the sun.

IN GOVERNOR'S HANDS

Keeler's Death Warrant May be Issued Before Many Days.

The superior court's decision refusing a new trial to John Keeler, murderer of Joseph Roessner, was received by Prothonotary Moore Friday, and after being duly certified, was mailed to Governor Tener.

It is probable that the governor will issue Keeler's death warrant this month, although the date of execution may be fixed for January or February, to give the prisoner time in which to prepare for the end.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE
ENDS ITS SESSIONS

An Attack on Secretary Bryan in a Resolution

Columbus, O., November 15.—After a day during which temperance forces from every part of the country assembled at the fifteenth national convention of the Anti-Saloon league of America went on record through the adoption of resolutions as favoring nation-wide prohibition of the liquor traffic to be attained by means of a federal constitutional amendment opposing the system of licenses or taking revenue from the liquor business, urging states to pass anti-liquor shipping laws and making a veiled attack on Secretary of State Bryan for his part in the recent senatorial campaign in Maryland, the convention adjourned here Thursday night.

The veiled attack on Secretary Bryan came when the convention adopted a resolution stating that federal officers interfering in state politics should consider themselves the moral guardians and political sponsors of men elected to office through their influence and should hold themselves responsible for the conduct of these men while in office.

Members of the resolution committee said that they had in mind Secretary Bryan and the part he took in the election of Blair Lee as United States senator from Maryland when the resolution was drawn.

Rev. D. Purley A. Baker was re-elected national superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league for two years.

STREET WALKERS FINED

Two Clearfield Girls Get Into Trouble in Altoona.

It is not often the women outnumber male defendants in city police court but Thursday was their day as the result of lively celebrations on Wednesday. Marie Sarah and Agnes Wilson, a trio of girls hailing from Clearfield, at 10 o'clock Thursday morning were given a hearing on the charge of street walking, disorderly conduct and profanity. They raised a lot of excitement on Seventeenth street and were taken into custody. They were each fined $25 or twenty-five days in jail.

MURDOCK TALKS
TO THE POINT

Famous Insurgent's Lecture
Pleases Fair Crowd

ATTACKS SPECIAL INTEREST

Victor Murdock, of Kansas, the noted insurgent who has stirred up things in congress for several years, delivered his lecture in the opera house Friday evening, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., and greatly pleased an audience which might have been larger. Mr. Murdock was presented to the audience by Judge Allison O. Smith, who in a few well-chosen words, told of the work Mr. Murdock has been doing for the people of this country. Judge Smith is a great admirer of the Kansas and his praise of Mr. Murdock's efforts along the line of reform was sincere.

Mr. Murdock's Address.

Mr. Murdock—who says he is proud of the title, "The Red Headed Insurgent," which has been bestowed upon him, made a most favorable impression upon the audience. His remarks were in keeping with his well-known reputation as a fighter. The cause of the people against the special interests are so strongly entrenched in political power that they ignore or oppress the people at will. The lecturer told of his struggle in behalf of the people in the matter of the mail-carrying railroads, in which the railroads were attacked by him for charging the government millions of dollars beyond what they were legally entitled to for carrying the mails. The dispute in congress bringing about the executive order of President Roosevelt prohibiting the railroads from weighing the mails seven days a week and dividing the railroads from weighing the mails their profits by millions of dollars.

Mr. Murdock expressed his opinion of special interests and crooked judges in a vigorous manner, stating that unless the people arouse to the danger that confronts them the special interests, aided by corrupt judges, would have full control of the country.

In closing the speaker hoped that some of the seed he had sown in his address would take root in the minds of young men. The trouble with the average American, he said, was that he does not think enough for himself, but takes too much for granted, holding fast to one or other of the political parties blindly. This has the effect of increasing the power for evil possessed by the special interests.

Friday evening a number of Mr. Murdock's admirers had him as the guest of honor at a dinner at the Dimeling. The affair was informal and the little party heartily enjoyed the personal intercourse with the noted congressman.

AN ITALIAN BAND

Clearfield to Have Another Musical Organization of Merit.

Clearfield is to have a band composed of Italian citizens. The band has been organized and Professor Salvatore Impallomany, of New York city, arrived in Clearfield on the Pennsylvania train yesterday morning to take charge of the organization of the band and to act as its instructor. The band will be conducted in connection with the Mutual Aid society of the Italian society and will have its headquarters with the society on Second street.

Prof. Impallomany received his musical education in Rome, Italy, in the royal academy of Music of St. Cecilia. He is a skilled musician and under his tutelage the Italian band of Clearfield will no doubt become famous throughout the West Branch valley. The band will have sixty members.

MRS. CLARA J. BOYLE

Death of Highly Respected Christian Woman.

Mrs. Clara J. Boyle, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edith Woodell on Water street, Friday morning, aged 63 years and 23 days. Mrs. Boyle was a widow and the following children survive her: Loren E. Boyle, clerk in the U. S. Engineer's office, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Mary Fulton, Clearfield; Mrs. Carrie Hall, Clearfield; Mrs. Charles L. Boyle, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Hattie Lewis, Fairfield; Mrs. Edith Woodell, Clearfield; Mrs. Mabel Gaultin and Mrs. Stella Bergquist, both of Pittsburgh.

FULFORD FUNERAL

Body of Well-Known Citizen Laid to Rest This Afternoon.

The funeral of George Fulford was held from the residence of his mother on Pine street this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. E. C. Reeve, of the First Presbyterian church, conducted the religious ceremony. Interment was made in Hillcrest cemetery. The pall bearers were Singleton Bell, Esq., William Hagerly, Esq., Hazard Murray, Esq., George R. Bigger, Esq., Richard Kennard and W. I. Betts.

JERSEY SHORE TERMINAL

Rumor That N. Y. C. Will Cease Running Trains to Williamsport.

The Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin says: It is rumored that after Monday next the Beech Creek division of the New York Central, which now operates trains into this city will no longer do this, but that its terminal point will be made at Jersey Shore. After that date, according to the rumor, all passengers desiring to go up the Beech Creek must go up the Fall Brook division of the New York Central and change cars at Jersey Shore and vice versa on the down trip.

If the rumor becomes a fact it will be necessary for various train crews residing in Williamsport and Newberry to remove to Jersey Shore, as they cannot arrive at Jersey Shore in sufficient time to make up their trains in the morning or get down there at night at any reasonable time. The report has caused considerable anxiety among Central railroad employees.

UNION SERVICES

Will Be Held in Presbyterian Church Thanksgiving Day.

Union Thanksgiving services will be held in the Presbyterian church Thursday morning, Nov. 27 at ten o'clock. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. B. A. Salter.

The offering will be for the Clearfield hospital. In view of the needs of the institution and the great work that is being done for the suffering, this offering should be a very liberal one.

Will Hold Euchre.

There will be a euchre in the St. Francis Catholic school on Wednesday evening, Nov. 19.

Married on Tuesday.

Cornelius Barron and Mrs. Kate Smith were married Tuesday evening 11:30 in the St. Francis Catholic church by Father Ryan. The witnesses were William Steiner and Mrs. New McDonald.

HUERTA HIDDEN;
MAKES NO REPLY

American Representatives Leave
Mexican Capital.

WILSON'S DEMANDS IGNORED

Expectation in Mexican Capital That Diplomatic Relations Will Be Severed Following Lind's Departure—Tuxpan at Mercy of Revolutionists—Negotiations With Carranza.

City of Mexico, Nov. 15.—Provisional President Huerta has given no indication that he intended to accede to the demands made of him by the United States government in regard to the newly elected congress which he was requested to prevent from convening.

When John Lind, the personal representative of President Wilson, sent a notification to General Huerta that the United States government would have no further parley with the Mexican government unless the provisional president replied to the American demands he also let General Huerta understand that the Mexican government must inform the members of the diplomatic corps of its action in respect to the congress at once.

Mr. Lind, who left the federal capital, has arrived in Vera Cruz, while Nelson O'Shaughnessy, charge d'affaires of the United States legation, awaits instructions from Washington. It is generally expected here that Washington will instruct Mr. O'Shaughnessy to close the embassy or to turn it over to the legation of some friendly power.

Say Huerta Was Not to Be Found.

All speculation as to the future, however, is tempered by doubt as to the state of affairs at the national palace. Representations were made to both John Lind and Nelson O'Shaughnessy that in reality the provisional president had not been apprised of the demands from Washington, and this appeared to be substantiated by statements made at the government offices. It was declared that Adolfo de Luna, Mexican minister of finance, himself had engaged in the search for Provisional President Huerta and up to a late hour had not succeeded in finding him either at the national palace, at his family home or at any of the places where he was accustomed to go.

Many persons here had regarded this absence as a ruse on the part of General Huerta to avoid the receipt of the notification from the United States, but there seems to be reason to believe that his country and the United States arrived at the point of rupture in their relations without the knowledge of the provisional president. Close friends and political associates of General Huerta appeared earnest in their assertions that they could not find him. It was suggested in some quarters that he had run away. This suggestion, however, was received with skepticism. It is assumed here by many of those familiar with the situation that the logical course to be pursued by the United States will be to recall Nelson O'Shaughnessy at once unless General Huerta appears upon the scene and yields all the demands of Washington. It is thought it would be followed soon by some act on the part of Washington which would be tantamount to recognition of the belligerency of the rebels.

The Palmetto State.

The origin of the state arms of South Carolina is thus given in the histories: "On June 28, 1776, a force of less than 100 Carolinians, under command of Moultrie, protected by the rude fortification of Sullivan's Island, in Charleston harbor, made of the trunks of a British fleet under command of Sir Peter Parker, and when the state of South Carolina was organized the state seal, which was first used in May, 1777, was made to commemorate this victory. A palm tree growing erect on the sea shore represents the strength of the fort, while at its base an oak tree, torn from the ground and deprived of its branches, recalls the British fleet built of oak timber, overcome by the palmetto."

Crocodile in a Tree.

An African hunter once found a large crocodile hanging in the fork of a tree about ten feet from the ground. As the place was fully half a mile from any water it was difficult to account for the crocodile's strange position. When questioned about the subject the natives explained that it was put there by an elephant. It seems that when the elephants waded into the Lake Narmid to bathe the crocodiles saw in the habit of worrying them and biting their legs. Sometimes when an elephant is annoyed beyond endurance it picks up its tormentor in its trunk, places it among the branches of a tree and leaves it there.—London Graphic.

A GOOD MOVE

Pennsy May Adopt a Wise Rule Regarding Employees.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company is considering the advisability of establishing a rule that employees shall live or take their rest, sufficiently near to their work to enable them to report for duty at any hour, day or night, with not more than one hour of necessary traveling between their home or resting place and the point where they begin work.

Many cases have come to the notice of the management wherein men are living considerable distance from their places of work, and though they spend only a reasonable time at work so much additional time is required in traveling to and from work that they do not have sufficient rest and recreation. In some instances men live from fifty to one hundred miles from the place where they report for duty.

The purpose of the Pennsylvania management in considering adoption of the rule in question is that men may have every reasonable freedom, directing their private lives to suit themselves but under the stipulation that they shall live, or take their rest, at points which will enable them to report for work without undue time elapsing in their doing so.

SOME RAILS ROLLED
AT THE BIG MILL

Probability of Plant Starting
Next Week

This week the rolling mill at Hyde City almost completed its preparations for the opening of the plant. For several days rails were rolled to give the management a chance to see if everything worked properly, and the result was all that could be desired.

The only defect that was discovered was in the motor which runs the machine which breaks up the old rails and other iron. This motor was found to be in need of repair, and this work is now in progress. It is expected that if no other hitch occurs the rolling mill will be in full operation next week, as everything is in readiness for the starting of the plant.

General Manager Baumgarten is satisfied with the manner in which the machinery runs, and believes that after the start has been made everything will move along smoothly.

Out at Service

A young housekeeper, if her cook is stupid, her nurse idle, her maid more given to flirtation than to household duties, sighs for the model servants of the good old times. But did "the good old times" ever exist historically, or do they only live in dreams and ballads?

Charles Dickens tells of the appalling stupidity of London kitchens. Sir Walter Scott mentions a genius who, fearing that all his master's bees would desert the hive, plastered the openings and suffocated all the inmates. Samuel Breck has grown a man's account of burglars, highwaymen, pirates and murderers among the convicts sent over from England before the Revolution. Daniel Defoe's pictures of extravagance, carelessness, rascality and all that is undesirable among servants is a classic. Jonathan Swift's "Directions to Servants" seems to forecast every story of negligence, or wastefulness, or dirtiness the present generation has heard.—Living Church.

The Top Hat.

Although the beginning of the "cylinder of civilization," as it has been called, can be traced back to the Elizabethan era, it is only about seventy or eighty years ago that the top hat of the present day reached its final shape. Since then it has altered slightly in the dimensions of the crown and the curl of the brim, but the hat itself has remained essentially unchanged. The top hat seems to have had its beginning in the habit of gallants in the Elizabethan period of cocking up one side of their broad brimmed, high crowned felt or beaver hats and securing them with a jewel. The French court later developed this into cocking up three sides of the hat and fastening one with a loop of ribbon. From this fashion came the cockade, now used only by grooms and footmen. The silk hat of today was born in France and supplanted the now nearly extinct beaver hat of practically the same shape, though considerably larger.—London Standard.

Hot Vinegar in Sauces.

If hot vinegar is used instead of cold when making meat sauce, it will greatly improve the flavor and give the sauce a better color.

Y. M. C. A. ATHLETICS

The gymnasium at the Young
Men's Christian association is now
in full operation and the winter
season of 1913-14 among the young
athletes of the association promises
to be a successful and profitable one.
The various classes are being organized and before the winter has
fairly begun each class will have
its full quota of members. Basket-
ball is the game with which the members will amuse themselves during November and December, with other
sports filling in the gaps.
The athletic department of the Y.
M. C. A. appeals to every boy who
wishes to grow up manly and healthy.
In the association gymnasium there
are opportunities for physical exercise and culture equal to those to
be found in much larger towns, and
parents should see that their young
sons take advantage of such whole-
some pastimes as are afforded by the association gymnasium. The early
training of muscles and sinews develops the body and makes the
mind stronger for the duties which
come in after years.

Clearfield will have an Italian
band, a fact which ought to give pleasure to music lovers. Italians
are natural-born musicians, and a
band composed of such material as
is to be found in Clearfield will
prove a valuable addition to the musical associations of the town. Clear-
field Italians are among the most intelligent and industrious of the sons
of Italy who have taken up their abode
in the United States, and have the
respect of the people of this town.

QUEER, ISN'T IT?

Queer, isn't it, that the Penrose
leaders are so anxious to have the Progressive voters rejoin the Republican party? These Penrose leaders
tell the people in one breath that
the Progressive party has been destroyed and in the next breath beg
these Progressive voters to return to
the Republican party. If the Progressive party has gone all to pieces,
as Penrose people say, why should
the bosses be so alarmed? Are they
afraid the Progressives will come
to life again?

The Progressive party is perfectly
willing to unite with the Republican
rank and file, but the Progressives
will never return to the Republican
party so long as that party is in control of Senator Penrose and his kind
men. This fact should be borne in mind by Penrose tools. Only by
renouncing Penrose and such braze-
bosses as he and his promises to
give the people good government
can the Republican party hope to
escape the disintegration which now
faces the organization.

It is useless for the Penrose machine that the Republican
party is the only party which promises to the people relief from political brigandage, but the people have
seen how easy it is for the Penrose
machine to forget its promises after
election. And the promises were
made only to fool the people. When
the people found that the Progressive
party would be true to its promises
they gathered about that party's standards four million of them voting in 1912.

It is useless for the Penrose machine to hope that the voters who

supported the Progressive or Washington ticket in Pennsylvania will return to the Penrose party. On the other hand, it can be stated with
positive assurance that instead of
being demoralized and about to
dwindle away, the Washington party
in this state is daily adding new recruits to its ranks, a fact that per-
turbs the Penrose machine a great
deal and causes the senator to fear
that his reign as boss of the Republican party in Pennsylvania will
be brief and that his chances of re-
election are fast disappearing.

You couldn't do better than buy
your young son a membership certificate in the Clearfield Y. M. C.
A. as a Christmas gift.

Don't take too long to thing about
helping the public library project
along, but join the movement at once.

Warren Worth Bailey, editor of
the Johnstown Democrat and member
of congress, says he does not want
to run for governor of Pennsylvania.
Warren sure displays great wisdom.

Cheer up! Probably if there is
war with Mexico you may escape the
draft.

The debts of the nations of the
world is said to be forty-two billion dollars. Wonder if this includes the little loans the impetu-
ous individual secures from his
friends occasionally.

Physicians are asked to remove
their whiskers in the interest of sanitation. Physicians ought to know
that millions of microbes lurk in
the loads of alfalfa which they carry
around on their faces.

Of course everybody will want to
hear the Thanksgiving concert to be
given by the Clearfield Choral society
on Tuesday evening, November
twenty-fifth. This concert promises
years.

ROOM AT THE TOP.

THERE'S ever a crowd in the
valley.
For the lower a soul de-
scends

The more it finds of the
smaller minds
That seek out their selfish ends
There's companionship in the valley.

With others your lot is thrown,
But the man who tries for the larger prize
Must travel the heights alone.

He must make for himself a path-
way
Where no other foot ever trod
Till he grows complete in continent sweet.

As he learns to walk with God,
There is glory upon the mountain,
Though the summit is cold and bleak.

Yet the radiant burst of the dawn
falls first
Like a blowing rose on the peak.

Then dare the paths of the mountain.
Oh, spirit with godlike fire,
Whose depths are stirred by an in-
ward word.

To struggle and to aspire,
Be not content with the shaggard,
In the valley of life to stop.
But with purpose hold heed the
adage old:

"There's always room at the top."
—J. A. Edgerton

Blind Swimmers.

The man who is unfortunate enough
to lose his sight or to be born blind is
says a medical authority, severely
handicapped on dry ground, but he
can, if he is a swimmer, find his way
easily enough in the water. Blind
people generally have a keen sense of
hearing, and they can steer themselves
in the water by sound as well as an ordinary man by sight. If they are
swimming toward a certain point a
whistle from time to time will enable
them to reach it with unerring accuracy. This fact has been proved by
some interesting experiments. A race
between blind men and ordinary swim-
mers on a lake resulted in a victory
for the former. Normal swimmers
lose much time in raising their heads
for the purpose of keeping their eyes
on the winning post. This also pre-
vents them from concentrating all
their attention on speed. Exchange

Roses For Restoring Hair.

Roses form the chief ingredient in
what is probably the earliest recipe for
a hair restorer on record. According
to Pliny, "wild rose leaves reduced into
a liniment with bear's grease make the
hair grow again in most marvelous
fashion." Pliny also recommends
"ashes of roses as serving to trim
the hairs of the eyebrows." Roses
figured prominently in several old time
strong drinks, such as rose soils, which
consisted of rosewater mixed with
aquas vitae and flavored with cinnamon. The favorite morning draft
among Elizabethan rosters was
"rosa soils, to wash the moulgrubs out
of a moody brain."—London Chronicle

Order Ball Game.

Tennis is pronounced the oldest of
all the existing ball games. It is impossible to give its origin, but it was
played in Europe during the middle
ages in the parks or ditches of the feudal castles. It was at first the pastime of kings and nobles, but later it grew popular with all classes. The French took it from the Italians and the English from the French. New

Lesson VII.—Fourth Quarter. For
Nov. 16, 1913.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Deut. xxxiv, 1-12
Memory Verses, 5-7—Golden Text,
Ps. cxvi, 15—Commentary by Rev. D.
M. Stearns.

We have now come to our last lesson
in the books of Moses and to the record
of his removal from the earth. The
book of Genesis covers a period of
over 2,200 years. Exodus over 200.
Numbers about forty years, but Le-
viticus and Deuteronomy do not bring
us any farther down the stream of
time. The book of Deuteronomy seems
to cover about one month, in which Moses rehearsed to Israel the Lord's
dealings with them.

We have seen that Aaron died in the
fifth month of the fortieth year and
Miriam in the first month (Num. xx,
1; xxxii, 38). Moses continued until
the eleventh or twelfth month. He began his rehearsal in the eleventh month
of the fortieth year (Deut. i, 3) and
continued until the time of his departure (chapter xxxi, 1, 2). We would like to call attention to many things in
these closing chapters, but will first
consider our lesson chapter, the first
four verses of which tell us how the Lord showed him from the top of Pis-
gab, over against Jericho, all the land
which He swore to Abraham, to Isaac
and to Jacob to give unto their seed,
but which neither Moses nor Aaron
could enter because of his rebellion
against the word of the Lord at Mari-
bah (Num. xx, 12, 24). It is written
that Moses pleaded with the Lord to
allow him to go over the Jordan and
see the good land, but the Lord would
not hear him and said to him: "Let it
suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter" (Deut. iii, 23, 27). And this because he had spoken unduly
with his lips, having allowed his spirit
to be provoked, and had smitten the
rock instead of speaking to it as God
had commanded.

Many a time he had pleaded with
the Lord in prayer for this rebellious
people, and now because of their in-request for him, it is denied. Yet God
is love, and love is kind. Well might
the psalmist say: "If thou, Lord,
shouldst mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand?" (Ps. cxlii, 2; xxxv, 2.)
We cannot but think of Him who
did not save Himself in order that He
might save us. Of this very event,
His decease at Jerusalem, Moses and Elijah talked with Him on the Mount
of Transfiguration some 1,500 years
after the event of our lesson (Luke ix, 30, 31). Of all the events that have
ever transpired on our earth none can
compare with those of Gethsemane.
Though there have been many fore-
shadowings, the mind of man cannot
grasp the awful realities of that day
and the Son of God suffering for the
sins of the world.

So Moses, the servant of the Lord,
died, but there was nothing sad in
such a death. It was a release from the
long conflict with the world, the flesh
and the devil, and a going home to
stay with God, whom he had long
known face to face. There was neither
sickness nor suffering; his eye was not
dim nor his natural force abated (verses
5, 7, 10). Aaron had no sickness (Num.
xx, 25-28). Sickness is not necessary
to death. Do we not see it all about
us and read of it in the papers every
day, whether it is called by the name
of heart failure or some other name?
Even should it be a violent death our Lord said, "Fear not them which kill
the body." And we are elsewhere
taught that to die is gain. It is to de-
part and be with Christ, which is very
far better; it is to be absent from the
body and present with the Lord, and
precious in the sight of the Lord is the
death of His saints (Matt. x, 28; Phil.
i, 21, 23; 1 Cor. v, 8; Ps. cxvii, 15).

Moses died and was buried in the
land of Moab, but no man knoweth
where (verses 5, 6). He and Eleazar
probably buried Aaron's body, but
there was no man present at the death
and burial of Moses. The Lord did it.
The record is, "He buried him." Perhaps the angels helped.

I am glad that the body is not the
person, and, though we bury bodies, we
do not, strictly speaking, bury people.
A man once said: "You may bury me if
you can catch me. There is great comfort to me in knowing that I shall not
be at my own funeral if my body ever
has one." There is always the possibility of not dying, but of being caught
up to meet the Lord in the air, for we
shall not all sleep (1 Cor. xv, 51; 1 Thess. iv, 16-18).

Some already have their glorified
bodies, as Enoch and Elijah, who were
translated, and probably those who
came out of their graves after the resurrection of the Lord Jesus (Matt.
xxvii, 52, 53).

It looks from Jude 9 as if the body
of Moses was raised from the dead, for
the devil does hate the resurrection of
the bodies of the saints, and that may
have been the cause of the contention
there referred to, for Michael is the
special angel of Israel (Dan. x, 13, 21;
Rev. xii, 7). The story of Joshua, the
new leader, will come before us more
fully in our next lesson. Let us give
attention to some of the last words of Moses. Notice how he set before them
life and good or death and evil; life
and death, blessing and cursing, urging
them to choose life, and to set their
hearts unto all the words which he had
spoken as their very life (Deut. xxxi, 15; xxxiii, 46, 47).

YOUTH.

WHAT do they know of youth
who still are young?
They but the singers of a golden song.
Who may not guess its worth or wonder—flung
Like largess to the throng.
We only—youth no longer, old so long—
Before its harmonies stand marveling—
Oh, we who listen: never they who sing!

NOT for itself is beauty, but for us
Who gaze upon it with all reverent eyes.
And youth, which sheds its glory
luminous,
Given over in this wise,
Itself the joy it may not realize.
Only we know who linger overlong Youth that is made of beauty and of song.

WITHIN THE LAW

FROM THE PLAY OF
BAYARD VEILLER

Copyright, 1913, by the H. K. Fly company.

As the eyes of the two met the boy rushed forward, and in the next moment the hands of father and son clasped firmly. Presently Gilder spoke, with an effort toward harshness in his voice to mask how much he was shaken. But the tones rang more kindly than any he had used for many a day tremulous with affection.

"Of course!" With the saying Edward Gilder roared gargantuan laughter. In the burst of merriment his pent feelings found their vent. He was still chuckling when he spoke, sage from much experience of ocean travel "Poker on the ship, I suppose."

"No, not that, though I did have a little run in at Monte Carlo. But it was the ship that finished me at that. You see, dad, they hired Captain Kidd and a bunch of pirates as stewards, and what they did to little Richard was something fierce. And yet, that wasn't the real trouble either. The fact is I just naturally went broke. Not a hard thing to do on the other side."

"Nor on this," the father interjected, dryly. "Anyhow, it doesn't matter much," Dick replied, quite unabashed. "Tell me, dad, how goes it?"

"Pretty well, pretty well, son. I'm glad to see you home again, my boy." There was a great tenderness in the usually rather cold gray eyes.

"And I'm glad to be home, dad, to be"—there was again that clearing of the throat, but he finished bravely—"with you."

The father avoided a threatening display of emotion by an abrupt change of subject to the trite

"Have a good time?" he inquired casually.

"The time of my young life. I tell you, dad, it's a fact that I did almost break the bank at Monte Carlo. I'd have done it sure if only my money had held out."

"It seems to me that I've heard something of the sort before," was Gilder's caustic comment. But his smile was still wholly sympathetic. He took a curious vicarious delight in the escapades of his son, probably because he himself had committed no follies in his callow days. "Why didn't you cable me?" he asked, puzzled at such restraint on the part of his son.

"You clear out of here, boy!" Gilder commanded brusquely. "I'm a working man. But here, wait a minute," he added. He brought forth from a pocket a neat sheaf of banknotes, which he held out. "There's carfare for you," he said, with a chuckle. "And now clear out. I'll see you at dinner."

"You can always get rid of me on the same terms," Dick remarked slyly. In the doorway he turned with a final speech, which was uttered in splendid disregard for the packet of money he had just received. "Oh, dad, please don't forget to give Sadie that $5 I borrowed from her for the taxi."

The owner of the store returned to his labors with a new zest, for the meeting with his son had put him in high spirits. Perhaps it might have been better for Mary Turner had she come to him just then, while he was yet in this softened mood. But fate had ordained that other events should restore him to his usual harder self before their interview. Smithson entered with an expression of discomfort on his rather vacuous countenance. He walked almost dumbly to the desk and spoke with evident distress as his employer looked up interrogatively.

"I'm very sorry, sir, but I thought it wiser, sir, to—er—to bring the matter to your personal attention. The lady happens to be the wife of J. W. Gaskell, the banker, you know."

CHAPTER III.

The Victim of the Law.

YES, Gilder did know. The mention of the name was like a spell in the effect it wrought on the attitude of the irritated owner of the store. Instantly his expression changed.

"How extremely awkward!" he cried, and there was a very real concern in his voice. He regarded Smithson kindly, whereas that rather peevish gentleman once again assumed his martial bearing. "You were quite right in coming to me." For a moment he was silent, plunged in thought. Finally he spoke with the decisiveness characteristic of him. "Of course there's nothing we can do. Just put the stuff back on the counter and let her go."

But Smithson had not yet wholly unburdened himself. He again cleared his throat nervously.

"She's very angry, Mr. Gilder," he announced timidly. "She—er—she demands an—er—an apology."

The owner of the store half rose from his chair, then threw himself back with an exclamation of disgust.

"God bless my soul!" he cried. Again he fell silent, considering the situation which Smithson had presented. At last, however, he mastered his irritation to some degree and spoke his command briefly. "Well, Smithson, apologize to her. It can't be helped."

When Smithson had left the office Gilder turned to his secretary.

"Take this," he directed, and he forthwith dictated the following letter:

J. W. Gaskell, Esq., Central National Bank, New York.

My Dear Mr. Gaskell—I feel that I should be doing less than my duty as a man if I did not let you know at once that Mrs. Gaskell is in urgent need of medical attention. She came into our store today, and—

He paused for a moment. "No, put it this way," he said finally:

"We found her wandering about our store today in a very nervous condition. In her excitement she carried away about $100 worth of rare laces. Not recognizing her, our store detective detained her for a short time. Fortunately for us all, Mrs. Gaskell was able to explain who she was, and she has just gone to her home. Hoping for Mrs. Gaskell's speedy recovery."

Smithson again entered the office, even more perturbed than before.

"What on earth is the matter now?" Gilder spluttered suspiciously.

"It's Mrs. Gaskell still," Smithson replied in great trepidation. "She wants you personally, Mr. Gilder, to apologize to her. She says that the action taken against her is an outrage, and she is not satisfied with the apologies of all the rest of us. She says you must make one, too, and that the store detective must be discharged for intolerable insolence."

Gilder bounced up from his chair angrily.

"I'll not discharge McCracken," he vociferated, glaring on Smithson, who shrank visibly.

"But about the apology, Mr. Gilder," he reminded, speaking very deferentially, yet with insistence.

"Oh, I'll apologize," he said with a wry smile of discomfort. "I'll make things even up a bit when I get an apology from Gaskell. I shrewdly suspect that that estimable gentleman is going to eat humble pie, of my baking, from his wife's recipe. And his will be an honest apology, which mine won't." And he left the room.

It was on this same day that Sarah, on one of her numerous trips through the store in behalf of Gilder, was accosted by a salesgirl, whose name, Helen Morris, she chanced to know.

"What on earth do you want?" Sarah required snapshippily.

"What did they do to Mary Turner?"

"They sent her to prison for three years."

"Three years?" The salesgirl had repeated the words in a tone that was indignant, yet a tone vehement with incredulous questioning. "Three years?" she said again, as one refusing to believe.

"Yes, three years." "Good God!" There was no reverence in the exclamation that broke from the girl's lips. Instead only a tense horror that touched to the roots of emotion.

"Say," Sarah demanded, with the directness habitual to her, "why are you so anxious about it? This is the third time you have asked me about Mary Turner. What's it to you. I'd like to know?"

The salesgirl started violently, and a deep flush drove the accustomed pallor from her cheeks. She was obviously much disturbed by the question. "What is it to me?" she repeated in an effort to gain time. "Why, nothing—nothing at all, only, she's a friend of mine, a great friend of mine. Oh, yes!"

There was a monotone of desolation as she went on speaking in a whisper meant for the ears of no other. "It's awful three years! Oh, I didn't understand! It's awful—awful!" With the final word she hurried off, her attitude one of wondrous grief.

Sarah was thinking intently of Mary Turner after her return to the office. As she glanced up at the opening of the door, she did not at first recognize the

figure outlined there. She remembered Mary Turner as a tall, slender girl, who showed an underlying vitality in every movement, a girl with a face of regular features, in which was a complexion of blended milk and roses, with a radiant joy of life shining through all her arduous and vulgar conditions. Instead of this, now she saw a frail form that stood swaying in the doorway, that bent in a sinister fashion which told of bodily impotence, while the face was quite bloodless.

"The district attorney told me to bring this girl here on my way to the Grand Central station with her."

THANKS.

THANK God for this bright frailty of life.

The lyric briefness of its reckless spring.

Thank God for all the swift adventuring,

The bold uncertainty, the strengthening strife.

Thank God the world is set to such a tune.

That life is such a proud and crashing wave:

That none but lifeless things shall be time's slave.

Like the long dead but never tiring moon; That godlike passion strangely leaps and runs;

That youth cannot grow old nor beauty stale;

That even death is fragile and must fall before the winds of joy that speed the sun.

—Louis Untermeyer.
